

Museum to Nanataki Falls

Museum to trailhead: 0.6km (one-way)

Trailhead to Nanataki Falls: 2.8km (one-way)

To Hell Valley (Ojigokudani), Mt. Iwate
From the area around Nanataki Falls, the number of beech trees increases.
large-diameterer Japanese oak found here

Sakhalin firs planted here

Continue along the mountain trail to your left at the terminus of the forest road
Sakhalin firs grow nearby

Matsukawa Power Plant water intake facility

elevation: 800m
Nanataki Falls

Yakkiri stream

The mountain trail and forest road join briefly.
The mountain trail then breaks away and continues to the left.

Mountain trail • forest access road branches off (red line) (blue line)

karamatsu planted here

Mountain trail and forest road run alongside each other
The autumn leaves of the forest trail are also beautiful.

"face tree" (Japanese linden)

Cross the forest road
Vehicles not permitted beyond this point
【七滝】("Nanataki Falls") sign

large Sargent's cherry tree

Along the mountain trail until Nanataki Falls, you can see the various remains of charcoal burning, and distinctively shaped Japanese oaks

elevation: 620m
Nanataki Falls trailhead
hikers box and sign

【A-2】
【七滝コース】
("Nanataki Falls trail") sign

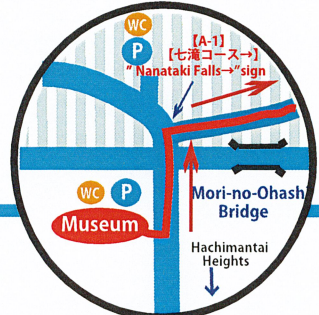

Matsukawa river

hot spring tank

elevation: 560m
Museum

Route from the museum to the trailhead:
One-way: 0.6km, 20min

- ① From the museum, cross the panorama line (public road) and enter the Prefectural Citizens' Forest
- ② After about 10m, turn right at the sign marked 【七滝コース⇒】 ("Nanataki Falls ⇒") and continue along the paved road.
- ③ Continue along the same path when you see the sign 【A-2】. When the hot spring tank is visible on the right, it is just a little further to climb to the trailhead.

Iwate Prefectural Citizens' Forest and Forestry Museum ☎0195-78-2092

1-515-5 Matsuo-yoriki, Hachimantai City, Iwate Prefecture, 028-7302

Opening hours: 9:00 a.m. - 4:00p.m. Closed: every Tuesday (or the following day if Tuesday is a public holiday)

※The Nanataki Falls trailhead parking lot is closed during winter.

Parking for a few cars only is possible when there is no snow

※There are no toilets along the mountain trail.

※The taking of any plants is prohibited under the Forestry Act.

@forest_iwate